To whom it may concern,

In my humble opinion teh settlement represents a slap on the wrist to an unfair heavy handed monopolist.

A clean break of the company into one devoted to operating systems (Win 95/98/ME/NT/2000/pocketpc) and all other applications would have been the best but costliest solution. soon microsoft will bundle all applications into one "operating system"

The optimum one would have been a requirement that all APIs should be openly published. any API used by a microsoft application that is not openly published should warrant a minimum fine of $1000 X number of copies of application sold.

my 1.5 cents
